Litter, graffiti and slope development concerns aired at council meeting

by Lisa Parsons

The Lemon Grove City Council heard citizens' concerns regarding litter, graffiti and hillside development at the Tuesday night meeting.

Austin Felden of Glebe Road said he is tired of unsolicited newspapers such as the "Californian Express Line" being thrown into his front yard. "What law do they have that they can litter?" he asked, "I don't want it. I didn't ask for it and to me that's litter."

Felden added that he believes several break-ins in his neighborhood are related to the unwanted papers. "A lot of us take off in our motorhomes or campers and those papers pile up in our front yards and they [burglars] can tell we're not home," he said.

Mayor Jim Dorman agreed with Felden, but said there was nothing the Council could do, "I have the same problem," he said, "I wish I could stop it too."

The growing problem of graffiti in the neighborhoods was another concern voiced by Felden. He suggested the Council enforce the 10 p.m. curfew to keep minors off the streets and add more police patrols. "These kids are on the streets after 10 when they're not supposed to be," he said, adding later, "If you know the police officer's out there, it's a deterrent."

City Manager Jack Shelver responded saying, "We've had a graffiti problem for 10 years or more. The council passed an ordinance banning kids under 16 from buying spray cans, but they just switched to other things. There aren't enough police officers to catch graffiti artists. We're fighting it by painting it out right away."

He added that there could never be enough police officers to be in the right place at the right time to catch graffiti artists and, as for Felden's request for an additional police officer after 10 p.m., he said, "The sheriff's department is of the opinion that they need more presence in the daytime."

Former Councilmember Jack Doherty, who addressed the Council's last meeting, again asked that hillside development in Lemon Grove be controlled. "Those hillsides are in need of protection," he said. "The City of Lemon Grove does not have standards in comparison with other cities in respect to hillsides. Development should follow the general contours of the land instead of destroying it."

Mayor Dorman said perhaps the matter should be addressed in a public hearing.

A City Staff report on the matter said that although Lemon Grove does not have a specific hillside development ordinance, the Planning Commission has given "particular attention" to hillside development to ensure that it is done in a sensitive manner. The Council voted to continue following the current guidelines.

In other business, the Council agreed to a Staff recommendation to allocate $5,000 from Community Development Block Grant funds to the Heartland Human Relations Association at the beginning of the year and $6,061 at the end. Heartland Human Relations is a non-profit East County group associated with many social concerns.

Chamber installs new leaders

The 1990 Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce installation dinner was held at the Singing Hills Country Club in El Cajon Saturday night.

Master of Ceremonies Bob Guest told the same old jokes and a few new ones from the calender the Chamber gave him when he retired from San Diego Trust & Savings. He was also entrusted with the responsibility of leading the flag salute.

Keynote Speaker Mayor James Dorman gave his "State of the City Address" following a sumptuous dinner. He stated that the City was in a sound financial state and revenues had increased--with a surplus for the year of over $700,000. To highlight the growth of Lemon Grove since its incorporation Dorman said that revenues had grown from $900,000 to nine million and expenses had grown in a near similar fashion.

He also commented on the successful redevelopment program conducted by the City and its efforts to increase the City's revenue by encouraging new businesses such as the Lemon Grove Plaza and Lee White Toyota's expansion.

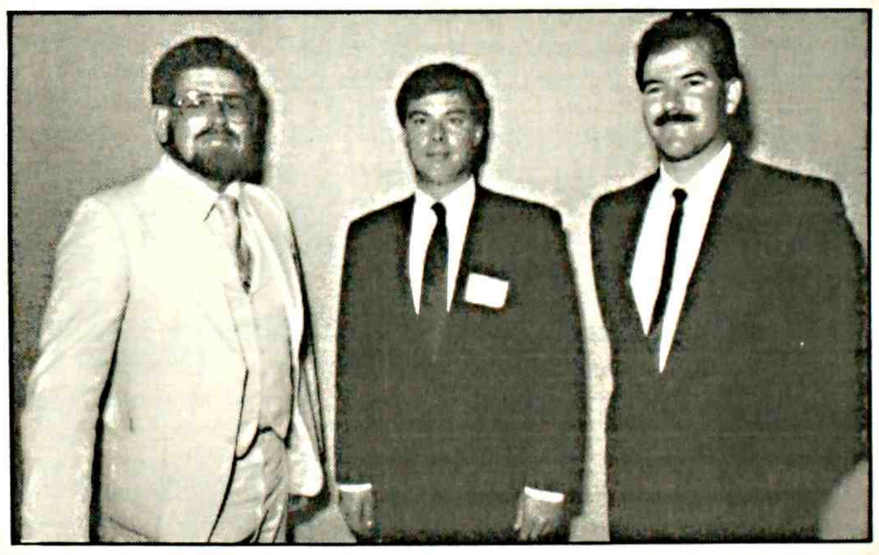
Outgoing Chamber President Nicholas Cappiello reflected on his term of office stating that the Chamber is also in good condition, when he came into office there was $4,000 in the bank and today there is over $7,000. He also said, thanks to Chamber President-Elect Pete Smith, Lemon Grove has an "outstanding city postcard, maybe the best of any city!" He also praised Smith for his work in rejuvenating the "mobile lemon" which should be ready for the Old Time Days Parade.

Joyce Lazok was praised by Cappiello for all the work she does and for saving the Chamber money on insurance and other expenses.

Cappiello was presented a plaque by the new Chamber President Kevin Smith who promised to work hard to keep the Chamber moving towards another successful year.

Mayor Dorman installed the new officers and Board Members: President Kevin Smith, President-Elect Pete Smith, Secretary Jan Davis and Treasurer Jim Murphy. Also installed were new Board Members: Susan Benedetto, Dr. Mike Clark, Dr. Tom Hixon, Hal Jahries, Jim Murphy and Ernie Pero Jr. (in absentia).

Outgoing Board Members Erica Aldrich, Steve Aldrich, Bob Guest, Jim Markley, John Pipes and Karen Warrant were thanked for their service to the Chamber and the community.



Chamber presidents of the future, present and past are Pete Smith, Kevin Smith and Nicholas Cappiello.

Girl's softball participation growing

by Tim Boice

Bobby Sox President Bill Hagen welcomes parents and players during opening day ceremonies at Bancroft Community School.

While Major League baseball players and owners were involved in a labor dispute, the Lemon Grove-Spring Valley Bobby Sox were busy practicing and preparing for Opening Day held last weekend.

Balloons lined the outfield fence, and red, white, and blue bunting decorated the backstop, as the sights and sounds of girl's softball returned to the Bancroft Community School fields.

Over 250 girls ages six to 18 make up 21 teams in the league. This is a vast improvement over recent years in which only 87 girls made up 6 teams.

Opening Day provided the girls a chance to show off their new uniforms, and parade around the field holding their sponsorship banners. Local businesses sponsor a team for $250. League president, Bill Hagen says, "We would like to express our appreciation to the sponsors as a whole because without them, frankly, this wouldn't work."

There are four divisions in girl's softball: Minis for ages six to eight; Bobby Sox for ages nine to 11; American Girls for ages 12 to 14; and a prep team made up of 15 to 18-year-olds.

A new field has been added at Bancroft to meet the demand of so many teams. A Mini field was built following registration. Hagen says parents were skeptical about the new field, "We realized we were going to have to improve the facilities. When we expressed a desire to put a new Mini field out there in what used to be a parking lot, we had many parents disturbed. There was a lot of real anxiety over it. But when they showed up and saw the field they couldn't say enough about it."

Two separate fund raisers were held to improve the fields and purchase new equipment and uniforms. The first was a sale of beef sticks which yielded a profit of nearly $5,200. Candy Emberton sold the most and received a BMX bike, her sister, Tiffany tied for second with Rikki Hoffpauir and they each won a seven inch portable TV. Julie Aunchmen finished third and received an AM/FM clock radio telephone.

A second fund raiser, selling chocolate bunnies and almonds, is expected to earn another $4,200 for the league.

"We provide a community service. We work hand in hand with the educational system. What we give to the girls is a vehicle to learn friendship, leadership, sportsmanship, and citizenship. That's our credo. We use the skills of playing softball to instill confidence and a feeling of self-worth to help give the girls the tools they need to become productive citizens in our community."

Juan Verduzco, a coach with three daughters, Andrea, Angela, and Lucy, all playing, summed it up by saying, "These girls make friends, and do more than just play softball. They go camping, have slumber parties, and go out for pizza. It's a great way for girls to make friends."

Spring winds are great for kite flying, but beware of the dangers

Ben Franklin went out one blustery spring day to fly a kite--searching for a way to prove the identity of lightning and electricity. The success of his discovery nearly killed him.

This spring, San Diego Gas & Electric suggests other less-famous kite flyers play it a little more safely and review some tips before they fly their kites.

"Franklin was out to make an electrical discovery. We just want to make sure no other kite flyers accidentally discover the power of electricity," said Steve Boulter, a troubleman for SDG&E. "Flying kites can be a lot of fun, but if you get into the wrong situation it can de deadly or cause an awful lot of damage."

The most important thing to remember, according to Boulter, is to fly your kite in open fields, away from power lines.

"Never fly your kite under power lines; if the kite gets tangled and you're holding the string, you might get a shock or cause a power outage," he said.

"And if your kite gets tangled up in power lines, never retrieve it yourself. Call SDG&E at 1-800-336-SDGE." It takes very little electric current to cause death.

"Under certain conditions, a 5-watt light bulb can electrocute someone," said Boulter. "A 12-thousand volt neighborhood electrical line or a high-voltage transmission line can certainly do the same."

Boulter outlined some other safety tips to keep kite flying fun:

*Stick with paper and wood for kite building or buying. And make sure the materials you use, like paper, wood and string, are dry. Wet materials conduct electricity. That means no rainy-day kite flying!

*Beware of metallic kites, balloons and strings.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

Neighborhood Watchman

Since my retirement and have time to sit on my "Big Veranda" in the front of our house I have become the "Unofficial Neighborhood Watchman". From my vantage point I can survey several homes in our block. My good neighbors reciprocate by keeping a watchful eye on our place the rare times that I'm not at home.

When my red van is parked in our drive all know that I am safe and sound, usually in my office. The other day my daily routine was disrupted as my wife came home from work early so I could drive her to her doctor's appointment. By taking her car and leaving my van in the drive, it made all look normal.

When my wife and I returned from the doctor's about 2 hours later we were amazed to find many changes to our place since we had left. "All the doors are locked, even some that we don't even have keys for, the lights are on, the closet doors are open, the dog is penned up in the back yard," my wife announced in near hysteria.

Some of the nearby neighbors gathered in our front yard to find out, "Why were the Sheriffs at your house a little while ago?" Boy! Was I confused. I called the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station to get some answers.

In just a few minutes a very courteous Deputy Manrique returned my call to explain that someone had called them, "There is a stranger in the house and it should be investigated immediately."

The Deputy went on, "My partner, Officer Weichert, and I responded and searched the place inside and out to find everything in order."

No sooner had Officer Manrique hung up the phone and it rang again. It was a friend from out church calling about some church business. "I called you earlier this afternoon. A man answered and said that you were out." She went on, "I thought that I might have dialed the wrong number so I dialed again. This time I asked for your wife and the same voice said she too was out for a while. It all seemed suspicious so I called the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Office to check on you."

There still remains a mystery: Did the nice "church lady" dial a wrong number twice? Was there a stranger in my house answering the phone? Is something missing that we haven't yet discovered?

It's a comforting feeling to know that our friends and neighbors care and worry about us. Thank God it was a false alarm this time, as it could have been something very serious.

A special "Thanks" to the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station and especially to Officers Manrique and Weichert for such prompt, efficient service.

Commentary

Death penalty preoccupies gubernatorial candidates

Death is increasingly pervading the California political scene these days. We are being inundated by a variety of candidates statements that they are "more for the death penalty" than their opponents. This writer believes that there is something terribly unseemly about all of this.

This column will not be used to discuss the pros and cons of the death penalty. California's voters certainly have strong opinions on the subject, and, according to polls, most seem in favor of it. The on and off legal wranglings over Robert Alton Harris and, at one time, the apparent closeness of his execution date have made for on-going front page headlines as well as near ghoulish med-paper descriptions of past executions. All of this is to be expected. But the frenzied jockeying of the politicians to be "stronger" on the death penalty is quite embarrassing and not a little frightening.

California's problems are near catastrophic. Our mental health system lacks the money to do even a minimal job. Homeless are filling our streets and parks. Our school systems have been almost mortally wounded by lack of funds and adequate classroom space. Drugs and crime are rampant in our cities and spreading everywhere. Our coastline is threatened by oil spills and our overall environment is under assault. And while all these problems await critical discussion and painfully reached decisions, our various gubernatorial candidates are engaged in a "yah, yah...I'm more for the death penalty than you are" contest.

But this is not only an indictment of our candidates, it is an even greater indictment of ourselves, the voters. The pollsters and image makers who plot campaign strategy for the candidates are convinced that this issue will be the basis for voter choice in November.

Remembering all too well that support of, or opposition to, Chief Justice Rose Bird was, in our last election, a public referendum on the death penalty, the "political pros" have once again judged us ignorant. The have once again decided that TV image, negative campaigning, and peripheral but emotional issues such as the death penalty are about all that we are up to digesting.

And so, instead of the critical survival issues of California, death stalks the stage. It doesn't say much for our politicians, but it says even less for us.

It's The Law

by Irene Miller, Attorney At Law

Question: I believe that as an American I have the right to privacy, but someone recently told me that this right is not part of the United States Constitution. Can you clear up our disagreement?

Answer: California citizens have a constitutional right to privacy because in 1972 Californians amended Article I, section 1 of the California State Constitution does not expressly contain a right to privacy.

A state may grant protections to it's citizens which are broader than the protections contained in the United States Constitution, but they may not grant less protection. The federal Constitution establishes the minimum fundamental rights which must be protected in our country. Californians have, on more than twenty occasions, enacted constitutional provisions which grant Californians rights greater than those in the federal Constitution.

Since the right to privacy is part of the California constitution, it cannot be withdrawn by a legislative enactment, that is, by a statute. Constitutional provisions are superior to statutes. If a statute and a constitutional right are in direct conflict, the statute must be declared "unconstitutional" meaning the statute must fall.

In the past, on a case by case basis the United States Supreme Court has occasionally found a right to privacy to exist as an unstated part of the Bill of Rights. In some cases the right has been said to stem from the first amendment; at other times the court has found a right of privacy in the fourth amendment. Some legal scholars also claim the right to privacy is inherently contained in the ninth amendment.

You must remember, however, that the right to privacy does not appear on the face of the United States Constitution. The force given to such a right depends largely on the philosophical makeup of the judges who sit on the Supreme Court at any given time and the facts of a particular case. Thus, the federally protected right to privacy may wax the wane depending on the composition of the court.

Sports Commentary

Baseball - at last

Heaven be praised, unless the world comes to an end before Tuesday, the 1990 baseball season will finally get underway.

Optimists looking hopefully past the dark clouds of labor unrest and owners' greed that threatened the structure of the game and delayed the season, now seek the silver lining of smooth sailing, minimal injuries and a suitable elixir for serious pennant fever.

Vice President in charge of baseball operations and manager Jack McKeon has been preparing himself for this season all his mortal life. Maybe even before that. McKeon is one of those "special" folks that came into this world with baseball already in their soul.

In McKeon's scheme of baseball daring-do, he has all the tools he has ever dreamed about to conduct a totally successful campaign.

Baring the Sid Gillman factor, of course.

Sir Sidney Gillman, as knowledgeable a sportin' genius as ever sent young men into serious competition, gave the world a philosophical maxim that will live through forth coming ages.

"The trip from the penthouse to the outhouse," says Sir Sidney, "is two injuries in the same position."

Gillman's game is football, McKeon's is baseball. The maxim serves all team sports as fundamental truth.

McKeon has punch and power, gifted starting pitching with a talented relief corps and solid position starters most places, yet with enough options to allow him some maneuverability.

McKeon really doesn't want to have eight locked in position starters automatically filling out his line-up card.

You can bet Bip Roberts will lead off with Roberto Alomar and four-time National League Batting Champion Tony Gwynn setting things up for power hitters Joe Carter, Jack Clark and Benito Santiago. With the two remaining positions, McKeon keeps eight other position guys in the game.

Third base and left field are shared ground for this group. Mark Parent is the back up catcher, but everybody else plays in relief or takes a turn at third and/or left.

And they all get in a couple games at a time. The stay sharp and are always ready and able to help the team.

Pitching is another dream come true. First off, McKeon is as good a judge of coaching talent as he is of playing skills. Pitching coach Pat Dobson is an absolute marvel at his craft.

Who says so? The record, for one. His pitchers, for another. "Dobber" has every member of the staff believing in themselves. If there is such a thing as being "pitching rich," McKeon has it.

But you can't win just by showing up. It takes talent, hard work, sweat, sacrifice and commitment from the entire squad.

McKeon teaches that kind of baseball. The players all know what it takes and how to play that way. It's smart baseball. It's the little things. Move runners. Get 'em in scoring position. Set up scoring chances for batters behind you. It's hitting the cut off man to keep opponents from getting more than they've earned.

Surely a team named the "Padres" should do well in a season that starts during Holy Week, with the home opener on Passover.

And we've got the entire season to enjoy pennant fever.

First water quality report due with your next water bill

All water customers will begin receiving their Water Quality Report during the first week in April. This report informs consumers about the quantity and nature of the constituents in their drinking water. It is the first annual report now required by California Department of Health Services. Some components of water have federal and state regulations with maximum levels allowed based on health considerations. Other parameters are aesthetic in nature affecting taste, odor, or clarity with no known health impacts.

A table clearly labels levels for federal standards, state standards and water sources, clearly showing that water provided by Helix Water District falls well within all standards set. "Around-the-clock testing and seven-days-a-week monitoring with the latest up-to-date testing equipment insure this," said Don Gauthier,Water Quality Superintendent for Helix Water District.

Gauthier characterized the report as "an excellent opportunity to tell our customers how good our water is and to what extent Helix Water District's laboratory and treatment plant go in order to insure that only high quality drinking water reaches our users." Over 1,600 tests are run weekly on the water at the Helix laboratory, located at the R. M Levy Treatment Plant.

The report also answers some commonly-asked questions about tap water versus bottled water, the sources of Helix water, and the history of the District.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: A Shock to the System

Graham Marshall is rather distraught. Saddled with an obnoxious wife, economic instability and a mortgage of biblical proportions, he longs for a promotion that will solve all of his problems. But what's this? Graham doesn't get the promotion? He is passed over for a less experienced and arrogant yuppie? What horror! Graham, what will you do?

How about...kill your wife, kill the yuppie, kill everyone who gets in your way? Sounds good to me.

"A Shock to the System" is a witty incredibly black comedy about corporate greed and the decline of business ethics. Graham watches his every dream crumble around him and decides the only way to find success is to literally kill the competition.

Michael Caine stars as Graham, giving another priceless performance, the kind moviegoers have come to expect from him. I know it sounds awful, but I actually enjoyed his murderous tendencies. That's the beauty of Caine's work: Graham is evil, but you still like him. Yes, I know he's a psychopath but... he's a charming psychopath.

The supporting cast is also good, with Swoosie Kurtz ("Dangerous Liaisons") as the nagging wife, Elizabeth McGovern ("She's Having a Baby") as the junior executive with whom Graham has an affair, Peter Riegert ("Crossing Delancey") as the yuppie scumsucker and Will Patton ("No Way Out") as the police lieutenant who is on Graham's trail.

The movie itself is very stylish, thanks to the combined effect of Andrew Klavan's sharp screen writing, Jan Egleson's unique, high energy direction and startling editing by Peter C. Frank and William A. Anderson. The film has a strong sense of fluidity and each scene melts, or sometime explodes, into the next scene perfectly. Egleson favors long, continuous shots which brings a greater sense of immediacy to his work and the editors who cut the climax of each scene short, plunging the audience into a new adventure before they can catch their breath.

While the film does start slowly and suffers occasionally from a lagging pace, the storyline is outrageous enough that the audience should forget its faults and leave the theatre truly amazed, perhaps even inspired.

Rogers honored; Arguilez leaving

A Neighborhood Watch block coordinator, Frank Rogers, was honored for his dedication and commitment to assist law enforcement by starting and maintaining a Neighborhood Watch group on his street for the past 10 years.

Rogers received a gift certificate for lunch at Lemon Grove's House of Canton restaurant.

Lemon Grove Crime Prevention specialist Sally Arguilez said that citizens like Rogers help make our neighborhoods safer and more cohesive.

Arguilez, who has worked in the City of Lemon Grove for five years, has been promoted to Volunteers Coordinator for County Parks and Recreation.

She will be responsible for recruiting and training volunteers with the county parks system. She will also be available to give presentations to social and service clubs.

Arguilez provided safety information for all sectors of the community--schools, neighborhoods, business groups and social/service clubs, as well as preparing crime prevention news items for the Review. She begins her new position at County Parks and Recreation on Friday.

We thank her for her past help, and wish her well in her new position.

Grossmont Hospital offers free caregiver classes

Children and parents reversing roles. It may sound like a plot for a TV situation comedy, but it is a scenario that occurs every day.

When an elderly person becomes ill or frail, an offspring is thrust into the role of "parent." The role of caregiver can greatly effect a person's emotional, physical and financial situation. As a community service to those facing this situation, Grossmont Hospital offers Caregiver courses free of charge.

The two-day Basic Caregiver course will meet from 1 to 5 p.m. April 10 and 12 in Classroom 15 of the hospital's Brier Patch campus. This class covers the basics of home-care nursing, including personal care, transfer techniques, reporting of symptoms and community resources.

The Advanced Caregiver class, which will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 13, teaches feeding techniques, special skin care procedures and back-saving body mechanics.

For information or registration, call Grossmont Hospital's Community Relations, 589-4140.

Award-winning drill team struts

"Sherry's Gotta Dance Drill Team" featuring Joshua Byrd, Rena Bryce, Amber Cusick, Emily Cusick, Jennifer Leiker, Kristen Wood, Jenny Strong, Angie Wills, Alina Garcia, Erin Carlson, Misty Forest, Melinda Forest, Stephanie Malady, Venessa Zapata, Angela Buckman and Kristy Allen perform their "Drill" manuevers for students at Monterey Heights Elementary School.

by Lisa Parsons

Nineteen energetic young people from all over Lemon Grove spent all day Friday entertaining schools and seniors with a dazzling dance show.

Once a year the members of "Sherry's Gotta Dance Drill Team" put in a marathon day of six performances to get in shape for the coming summer parade season and work out any hitches in their routine. On Friday, Joshua Byrd, Rena Bryce, Amber Cusick, Jennifer Leiker, Kristen Wood, Jenny Strong, Angie Wills, Alina Garcia, Erin Carlson, Misty Forest, Melinda Forest, Stephanie Malady, Venessa Zapata, Angela Buckman, Kristy Allen, Christina Byrd, Heather Bryce and Kristy Sullivan performed at four schools: Golden Avenue Elementary, Mount Vernon Elementary, San Altos Elementary and Monterey Heights Elementary; The Lemon Grove Senior Citizen's Center and Mount Miguel Covenant Village.

The Drill Team members range in age from 10-years-old to 14-years-old and are instructed by Sherry Wharff.

Wharff, who grew up in Lemon Grove and graduated from Mount Miguel High School, said she requires her students to give the Drill Team a one year commitment. She said all of the kids and their parents are hand picked because the award winning Drill Team demands a lot of time and dedication. "We practice 2 1/2 hours of Friday and from 6-11 every other Saturday during the summer."

The Drill Team represents Lemon Grove in parades from San Diego to Los Angeles and has won several awards.

The show consists of song and dance numbers ranging from "Annie" to a "Simon Says" style drill down.

"Sherry's Gotta Dance Studio" located at 2615 Lemon Grove Avenue has classes in tap, jazz, acrobatics, Hawaiian dancing and drill team.
